The Trooper Potts VC Memorial Site

One Reading Central

T.P. Bennett Architects, 2010

On a commanding site, with a roundabout in front and the railway behind, this is a large and forceful building on Forbury Road. Although it has been described as 'an anywhere building', it is not however merely a monolith, as it has interesting angles and something has been made of the side facing the railway – for some people it's how they recognise they are arriving at Reading Station. Part-let to Yell at present.
